Category:Punched card Category:Digital camerasQ: PHP session returns null I have been trying to get a very simple session working but to no avail. I am following the basic guide here: Here is the index file: This is the log in page. You have not been logged in; } ?> When I go to a different page, it redirects but returns a null session id. When I log in, it redirects to the login page just fine. What have I done wrong? A: There are a few errors. First, you're using different variables for $_SESSION['userid'] and the $_SESSION['userid'] in the header, so you get no session variable. Change the line in index.php to: $_SESSION['userid'] = 5;
Next, your input field in login.php is: This stops the session id from being sent with the rest of the form data. You also need to send the session cookie if you want to have session variables on the page. To do this, use a form method set to POST. Add the line:
