alleged pursuit of negative information on former candidate Hillary Clinton and aid in the alleged use of WikiLeaks for that purpose. I tried to read the file and get only the key, but I get values like THISPUBLICKEYFILE I wrote the code like this: with open("public.txt","r") as key: print(key.read()) I don't understand, why I get values like THISPUBLICKEYFILE. A: Its because its opening the file with a readline. From the docs: readline(...) Read up to n bytes from the file-like object. A line break is considered to be two characters, a carriage return followed by a linefeed. On some operating systems, the line break character may be locale specific. On Windows, a carriage return character ('\r') followed by a linefeed character (' ') indicates a line break. You can just do key.readlines() to read the file line by line. You should then have a list of strings, where each string is one line. I went with my husband for lunch & dinner on a Wednesday at Shunji's. We are 2 women and the lunch was a Japanese lunch. For dinner we had another Japanese dinner but they changed our order & didn't call us to let us know. I recommend not going for dinner because there are better restaurants in Shibuya.
